

Tinley Woman Swears Out Warrant for Arrest of Blue Island Policeman

Monday night while the village council of Tinley Park was involved with the question of the appointment of a police chief, a call came from the Mauren home on the east end of the village that a fight was in progress in front of their home.

Wm. Rick, Bert Fulton, Clarence Goessel and Art Beck responded to the call and found that the fracas was over the price of some ducks which three men from Blue Island wished to buy. Things were quieted and the men left in an automobile. They were watched by the Tinley men and were seen to go back to the same spot, so they again gave chase and the Blue Island fellows left hurriedly.

One of the men was later seen to get out of the car and started to walk down the road.

Charles Miller who is connected with the county highway motor cycle department was called from the Legion meeting he was attending at Tinley Park and went to pick up the man afoot and also watch for the others, but the other car had picked him up in the meantime and sped out of sight.

Tuesday morning Mrs. Mauren found a lock broken from the chicken house, a number of chickens missing and later found their heads in the rear of the chicken house. She called up the Homeview motor cycle station and sought a warrant for the arrest of the trio.

In the afternoon Mrs. Mauren appeared at the office of Police Magistrate Clyde Rice in Tinley Park and sought warrants for the arrest of the men. She did not know the names of two but one of the three was named as John Warbanski, who Magistrate Rice says he understands has been on the Blue Island police force for years. Another of the trio was said to be "Cooky" Wilkie of Blue Island, but as his first name was not known, Magistrate Rice could not issue a warrant for him. In the warrant issued for the arrest of Warbanski, the latter was charged with disorderly conduct. The three were seen at the Mauren place by Magistrate Rice and as Warbanski was not brought to his office for trial, Magistrate Rice thinks the matter was settled between the parties involved. Magistrate Rice is of the opinion the trio were full of booze and did not realize what they were doing.

Mrs. Mauren in her complaint alleged that the men had sought to buy eight ducks and when she asked 30 cents a pound for them they offered to pay only a dollar per duck upon which an argument ensued and in the altercation which followed the ducks were thrown from the auto and two were stepped on and killed. She charged Warbanski called her orderly conduct which he was charged with.

Public Safety Only Reason For Road Petition--Bruder

Editor News-Bulletin:

I have been criticized for circulating the petition calling for a new highway paralleling the Rock Island from the Mokena road to Route 51. I am not in politics, and I am not receiving any remuneration from the Rock Island for doing this. The sole reason I had for circulating the petition in question was to provide a means so Cappel crossing would not have to be used and thus provide safety for the autoists as well as passengers on the Rock Island trains. About a year an auto driven by Mrs. Albert Maue became stalled on the Cappel crossing as a suburban train was approaching, but luckily the engineer was able to stop in time. This incident shows that not only the lives of autoists are endangered in a case like this, but the passengers on the trains are like endangered as the train might easily be derailed. There are about 70 commuters from Mokena riding the suburban trains each day and if any of them should be killed or injured as a result of a crossing accident it would be a tragedy which a little forethought now will tend to avert.

Big Meeting At Mokena Oct. 14, On New Road

A meeting of especial interest to Frankfort township will be held next Monday evening, October 14 at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the new Mokena Public school when a public hearing will be held on the matter of a new highway which has been petitioned for to run parallel with the Rock Island railroad from the Mokena road near the Emil Cappel farm eastward thru the George Maue and Klose farms to route 51. The road in question if built would provide a way of connecting these two highways without using the Cappel crossing which has been the cause of a number of accidents and deaths.

The Rock Island railroad is vitally interested in this new proposed highway. Sometime ago the Rock Island had maps made of this road and on these maps indicated the closing of the Cappel crossing. This however, raised a storm of protest in Mokena, many of the business people feeling that the closing of the crossing would drive business away from the village, especially from the east and as a result much opposition was aroused against proposed highway altho the petition filed for this highway does not mention that the Cappel crossing be closed or eliminated.

In order to settle the matter as provided by law, Commissioner Emil D. Cappel of Frankfort township has called the public hearing for next Monday night so that everyone interested can discuss the proposed project and vote for or against it. The result of the hearing will then be filed with County Supt. of Highways, Will H. Smith of Will County. Continuation of the proposed road westward thru Mokena to Wolf Road is also finding much favor. The cost of the project would of course mean that the highway would have to be taken over by the county and could be built from the gas tax money accruing to the county.

New Lenox Now Has Flagman

For many years New Lenox township has been trying to have the Rock Island place a flagman at the crossing west of the depot in that village, but without success. Altho there is a warning bell at this crossing, it is a more dangerous crossing now than before as there is more traffic on this road and many children have to use this crossing going and coming from school. Senator R. J. Barr, himself a resident of New Lenox township, recently took the matter up with President James Gorman of the Rock Island Lines and as a result a flagman has now been placed at this crossing. The flagman arrived the past week.

Public Service To Render Fast Service Via Plane

"The Northern Light", new Sikorsky airplane, delivered to Public Service Company this week, for general use in administration and control of the company's system.

As a further modern means of rendering fast and efficient service to its customers throughout the 6000 square miles of Northern Ill. territory served with gas and electricity, the Public Service Company has purchased a Sikorsky amphibian airplane, which has been named "The Northern Light". This plane will arrive in Chicago the latter part of this week, and the purpose of this letter is to give you a description of the plane itself and what advance information on its arrival is available at this time.

Operating a gas and electric system over so widespread an area with continuous day and night service in more than 300 towns there are innumerable uses to which the plane will be put. It will be invaluable in patrolling and inspecting electrical transmission lines, in planning growth and development of the company's facilities for speed and efficiency in the control and administration of its widespread system.

The plane was built in the Sikorsky factories at College Point, Long Island, New York. After acceptance tests at the factories, it will be flown to Atlantic City, New Jersey, where it will be officially delivered to Britton I. Budd, President of this company, who will previously have arrived in Atlantic City to address a convention of the American Electrical Railway Association. After inspection and acceptance by Mr. Budd, the plane, piloted by Arthur L. Caperton, will be flown direct to Chicago, landing at the foot of Monroe Street, with a group of the company's officials as passengers.

Mrs. John Balaz read an instructive article on "The Garden Calendar for October" after which a very interesting and worth while discussion followed about wild flowers and berries. The club also voted to hold regular meetings the first Tuesday of each month. The next meeting will be held on Tuesday, November 5th at the home of Mrs. Wm. Lowe. Paving On S. W. Highway Underway

Paving of the Southwest Highway from 135th street toward Orland Park is well underway and the contractor expects to have the job finished up to 143rd street in Orland Park within the next 15 days.

There will be two grade separations on the Southwest Highway, one over Keane Avenue northeast of Orland Park and one at 123rd st. This highway is now paved from 135th street to 119th street and from there is a gap of 3 miles to 95th street. It is understood that the securing of right of way in this section has been settled and survey work will be started before long. From 95th street the Southwest Highway is paved into Chicago. When the 3 mile gap and the two grade separations are finished the much talked about Southwest Highway will be a reality. For many years Dr. W. R. Schussler of Orland Park and others of this section have been talking Southwest Highway. A few years ago a concerted move was begun to get this highway thru and the News-Bulletin had a part in this move by way of promoting the publicity end of it. At that time no other paper gave any publicity to this needed highway.

The cost of the grade separation on Southwest Highway over Keane Avenue was set at $60,000 by the county commissioners and it is reported that the job has been awarded to a contractor at a price of $15,000 below the engineers estimate.

Mokena Council Enforces Vehicle Tax Ordinance

The Mokena council has at last enforced its automobile or vehicle license ordinance to the letter. Five delinquent auto owners residing in the village limits had not taken out their 1929 license and one of these was in arrears from 1928. Repeated notices were given them also notices from the village attorney, yet they paid no heed. As a last resort, Alderman Edward Martie swore out complaints against the delinquent auto owners, charging them with violation of the vehicle license ordinance. The matter was turned over to Police Magistrate John F. Schultz who issued warrants for their arrest. Before serving the warrants, Magistrate Schultz notified the guilty parties to appear in his court and answer to the complaint. They did. Each was assessed $2 above the $5 vehicle license for filing fees and was let off easy. Had any of the cases gone to trial the costs would have been heavy.

The village of Mokena has demonstrated that delinquent vehicle licenses can be collected and the ordinance enforced if the proper remedy is applied.

TINLEY ALDERMEN BUCK MAYOR FUNK ON POLICE CHIEF; 4 ALDERMEN OFFER TO RESIGN

The village hall at Tinley was the scene of a heated argument between Mayor Wm. Funk and some of the aldermen last Monday night.

The controversy it appears centered around the recent appointment of Fred Schmediknecht as police chief by Mayor Funk.

The hall was practically crowded to capacity, there being many who found standing room only at that at a premium.

The meeting which had been called for 7:30 p. m. was not called until 8 p. m., the reason being that there were only two aldermen present. The village clerk, Harry Mager tried to reach each of the four absent aldermen by telephone, but to no avail, so rather than disappoint the multitude of spectators present, Mayor Funk called for a meeting of the Local Board of Improvements of which one alderman and the mayor were the only two members present.

In the meantime three of the four absent aldermen entered and immediately Alderman Fred Hick moved to adjourn the meeting of Local Improvement Board and asked that a roll call for the village board meeting be called.

In the meantime a call came in that a fight was in progress near the Mauren home and Mayor Funk issued instructions to advise Chief of Police Fred Schmediknecht.

At this stage of the game an announcement was made enlightening the many spectators as to the reason of the absence of the four aldermen. It so happened that these aldermen advised that many of the towns people come to them and complain that the aldermen are not giving the people the protection they feel should be given them.

The four aldermen claim that in view of the fact that they had not been given a voice in the appointment of the chief of police nor even advised that the appointment was made, decided to draw up a blanket resignation for the four aldermen which the latter signed and handed same to Mayor Funk, the blanket resignation to be effective October 10, unless a resignation was tendered by the newly appointed police chief and such resignation accepted by the mayor.

Mayor Funk explaining his side of the case to the people said that at a recent date the board of directors of the Tinley Park Lions Club having been called together by the president brought up of their own accord the subject of appointing Mr. Schmediknecht as police chief and he accordingly acted immediately. When Mayor Funk asked Bert Fulton, Edward Mohr, Selby Hirsch and Wm. Wannemacher, the four aldermen who split with the mayor, why they did not wait until the meeting with their resignation, the reply was that he did not wait with the appointment of the police chief.

The aldermen who had offered their resignations and the remaining members of the village board agreed to call a special meeting to discuss the matter among themselves at some later date. Mayor Funk advised that he could not be present as he would be out of town, but would sanction any decision the board may arrive at. Chief of Police will serve to the first of the next month as he was appointed for the month of October. Chief Schmediknecht for years acted in the same capacity, but the contention brought up was that he was now a rather elderly man for that position.

The Parent-Teacher's Association had a committee at the meeting and

Tries To Cut Around Traffic Lands In Ditch

The Lincoln highway near the Willard Owen farm southwest of Mokena was the scene of a serious auto accident Saturday night. A Mr. Bell of Homer township was going east on the highway when a Buick touring car also going east attempted to cut around him at the foot of the hill and as he did so another car going in the opposite direction suddenly loomed up in front of him so the driver had no alternative but to ditch his car and in doing so the four passengers of the car were injured. They were all taken to the Silver Cross hospital at Joliet. The Buick was badly demolished.

FURRED TWEED AND BROADCLOTH FAVORITES FOR AUTUMN WEAR

Swagger Costume in Furred Tweed.

SUITS grow more tweedish with every passing hour. The new tweeds are the talk of the town. And as if these handsome tweed suits were not sufficient unto themselves, they are being lavished with luxurious and novel fur to a thrilling degree. Oh! there's no doubt about it the furred tweed suit is having its day, and what a day of triumph it is proving to be.

The new-this-season tweeds are very interesting. One of their characteristics is that of being loosely woven. Then, too, they introduce such features in their weaving as being flecked, or nubbed or variously patterned, usually with yarn of a different color. These flecks and nubs and otherwise splashes of contrasting yarn are in turns complemented with matching fur trimmings. For instance a brown tweed decked with white is trimmed with white caracul, a blue tweed spotted with gray takes on gray fur borderings, collar and cuffs.

The swagger costume in the upper picture gives an idea of what is in promise in way of furred tweed suits for the coming months. There's chic supreme written in every detail of this suit, from its tuck-in blouse, to its tuxedo revers of curly astrakhan so cleverly belted. It is everything it should be, according to the standard set for suits of the high-toned class.

Designers are certainly doing wonderful things in the way of creating suits which display refreshing originality. In the current suit showings such striking novelties hold forth as black and white tweed enhanced with black fur pointed with white, or that which is ultra-smart, a red toned tweed trimmed with fox dyed to match. Black tweed with black fur presents another fashionable theme. A salt-it is made and the fur which enriches it, ever creates a feeling of gentility and refined elegance. Which is exactly the spirit of the new fashions—to tune to the gracious dignity of the gentlewoman rather than cater to the caprices of the flapper. So it is that coat displays are to a large extent made up of all-black models which glory in their patrician styling and materials.

While for the colorful sports coats novelty rough surfaced woollens are the rage, when it comes to the all-black dressy coat, it is the smooth-surfaced weaves which are sought, such as broadcloth, duvetyn and suede-finished effects. The list of media for the black coat is incomplete which does not cite the importance of velvet. The competition is keen between the two—black cloth and black velvet.

It happens that the fur which trims the broadcloth coat which pretty Laura la Plante, motion picture actress, is wearing in lower picture, is and-pepper tweed without any fur at all is made up with novelty touches, the newest note being the conspicuous use of large bone buttons on revers, collar, cuffs and also on the pockets.

Black for coats is a style message which comes straight from Paris. In fact la Parisienne is making black a paramount theme, not only in matter of her luxuriously furred coat, but likewise her hats, her frocks for both formal evening and daytime wear, accent the favor for distinguished black.

Of the handsome black coats which have been given a stellar role in the autumn and winter style program, one inclines to say that they have developed a superiority complex, for there's certainly nothing inferior about the costly furs and fine materials of which they are fashioned.

A patrician all-black coat of quality kind, both as to the cloth of which of the long-haired variety, for such pelts as black fox, wolf, lynx and monkey are in excellent style. However, just as much, if not more, enthusiasm is expressed for flat and fabric-like furs such as caracul, Persian lamb, broadtail and astrakhan.

Novelty is the keynote to all fur treatments this season, together with super-luxuriousness. Especially do the voguish flat furs yield to unique manipulation. Collars embrace every known variety. They begin with simple little upstanding flares, dress-maker types they call them, for a clever bow or some other whimsical detail usually styles them, and then on and on they go through various stages such as cravat scarfs, kerchief squares, tuxedo revers, perhaps climaxing in huge affairs of shawl collar type or assuming generous roll effects.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Co-operation with the United States Immigration bureau for the deportation of alien convicts was announced as a new state policy at the first meeting of the members of the board of pardons and paroles appointed by Governor Emmerson. Thirty deportation warrants were served on inmates of the Joliet penitentiary, to be effective immediately upon their release. Rodney Brandon, director of public welfare since Governor Emmerson's inauguration, asked advice and criticism of the plan to shorten the prison terms of aliens who may be sent back to the country from whence they came. W. C. Jones, new chairman of the parole board, said a survey is being made of those who come under this classification. The plan is for the governor to grant conditional pardons or paroles to convicts certain to be deported, providing the state's attorney of the county in which the prisoner was convicted does not oppose this modicum of clemency.

Petitions presenting several possibilities for appointment to the vacancy in the Supreme court caused by the recent death of Justice Cyrus E. Dietz of Moline have been presented to Gov. Louis L. Emmerson by lawyers and politicians of northwestern Illinois. Rock Island county advances Judge Charles J. Searle with approval of the county Republican central committee and endorsement of the Henry County Bar association. Knox, Fulton and McDonough counties offer Judge George C. Hillier of Macomb, judge of the Ninth judicial circuit. Adams county advances George Wilson, prominent Quincy lawyer, with its bar association's approval. Jacksonville proposes Judge Paul Samuel as a good man to fill the vacancy. County Judge George D. Long of East Moline announces that he will seek the post without the support of his county committee.

Former United States Senator L. Y. Sherman was guest in Springfield for a few days, returning to his home in Seabreeze, Fla. Mr. Sherman has retired from all business and professional activities and has not interested himself in politics since the last national campaign, when he played a prominent part in the Florida "revolution."

The following persons have been recommended by their respective congressmen and by Senators Deneen and Glenn to the director of census for appointment as supervisors of districts outside of Cook county: Headquarters at Dixon, Martin J. Cannon; Rockford, Carl A. Lagerstrom; LaSalle, John J. Massieon; Aurora, Lewis R. White; Joliet, Frank J. Gosporadic; Moline, Lee R. Blackman; Galesburg, E. H. Blaisch; Peoria, H. C. Bingham; Bloomington, Miss H. M. Hallam; Danville, Paul S. Millikin; Quincy, W. C. Bradley; Pekin, James E. Conaghan; Champaign, Louis R. Zech; Jacksonville, Harry C. Clement; Decatur, Edwin W. Jokisch; Alton, Oren Shearburn; Effingham, Herman R. Scherbarth; East St. Louis, George H. Eckert; Centralia, A. J. Johnson; Murphysboro, Henry J. Busch; Harrisburg, Roy L. Serlight. Official appointments are being made by the director of census as rapidly as possible.

The fifth annual state corn husking contest will be held in Knox county, November 8, it has been announced by farm bureau officials. A champion will be selected to represent Illinois in the annual national contest. Knox is the home county of Walter Olson, state champion in 1928. A new regulation, adopted on advice of Williams, Holmes and Olson, former champions, makes clear the kind of corn to keep when the judges sort the gleaners' nubbins.

City physicians, directors and commissioners of public health from cities of the state will gather in Springfield October 17 and 18 for the annual convention of the Illinois Municipal league. Dr. Andy Hall, state health director, is chairman of the health section of the league and will outline the state health program.

Downstate boxing conditions were probed when Gen. John V. Clinlin, chairman of the state athletic commission, conferred with Governor Emmerson and interested members of the ring fraternity. General Clinlin voiced the opinion that if Wisconsin and New York can regulate boxing there is no reason why Illinois cannot do the same. This can be done, he said, only by enforcing the law in all cases.

Thirteen senatorial contests loom in Midwestern and Western states, according to forecasts in Illinois, Minnesota, Iowa and Colorado.

Whether increased rates of the Modern Woodmen of America are warranted will be passed upon at the October term of the Supreme court in a test case from the Circuit court of Cook county, where the rates were sustained. A number of injunction suits have been filed in various parts of the state. One filed in the Sangamon circuit will be heard on its merits soon.

President Hoover has been invited to make a pilgrimage and address at the shrine of Abraham Lincoln in Springfield on the emancipator's next birthday, February 12. The invitation was extended by Senators Deneen and Glenn, and by Representative Yates. The President said the date was too far distant to make a definite decision, but he would consider it. Premier Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain has also been urged to visit the shrine of Lincoln during his presence in the United States in October. More than a month ago the invitation was given by the Mid-Day Luncheon club and was presented by Ambassador Charles G. Dawes. Recently a cablegram was sent by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson. The invitation was receiving attention, according to word from Premier MacDonald's secretary.

S. J. Stanard, secretary of the Illinois State Dairymen's association, former state director of agriculture, announces the 1930 dairy convention and show "on wheels" will be held in January in four widely separated centers—Carmi, Shelbyville, Hillsboro and one other city, as yet undetermined. The state association's dairy special will be made up of a string of cars filled with exhibits and dairy cattle. Four sectional dairy judging contests for both juniors and adults will be a feature, and in each locality visited dairy specialists will present cattle judging demonstrations. Dairy production and marketing will be discussed by a staff of speakers.

A committee of dairymen has been appointed by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson to attend the National Dairy show at St. Louis October 12 to 19. October 15 has been designated as Illinois-Indiana day. Those appointed to the committee include Frank O. Lowden, former governor, honorary chairman; State Senator Clarence F. Buck, director of the state department of agriculture, active chairman; Frank Channing, superintendent of the dairy husbandry division of the department of agriculture, secretary, and president of various dairymen's associations.

Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, commander of the United States Marine corps, Quantico, Va., and former director of safety in Philadelphia, was the principal speaker at the state arsenal, Springfield, in one of a series of programs being given throughout the state in connection with a tour of Illinois by the art extension committee of the university. Major Butler declined to be hailed as a hero and talked on some of his interesting experiences as a "hard-boiled Marine." Lorado Taft, noted sculptor, presented an interesting discourse, in which he told of his love for Illinois, her scenery, her "smiling prairies" and her place in the nation's history. Gov. Louis L. Emmerson presided at the meeting.

The state oil inspection department, of which Walter Miller is head, inspected 31,351,750 gallons of gasoline in Cook county during August and collected fees of $9,400. Under the new law, the inspection fee is three cents per hundred gallons. Inspections down state are expected to exceed Cook county because of the large amount of kerosene used. The department estimates that the annual inspection will reach 800,000,000 gallons, affording a revenue to the state approximating $250,000.

Revised estimates of revenue from gas tax collections in August place the figures at approximately $250,000. Based on this estimate, the gas tax revenue for the year should aggregate $25,000,000, of which the state will receive $16,000,000 and the counties the remainder for road work. Fees from motor vehicles registration have already mounted to over $16,000,000 for the year and indications are the total will reach the $17,000,000 mark, far in advance of any past year.

Buy Illinois coal and improve conditions in the mining industry of the state, is the plea made by Governor Emmerson to dealers and consumers of coal. The governor asks the public to co-operate by specifying Illinois coal in their orders. He points out that by united effort the consumption of Illinois coal might be increased 20,000,000 tons each year. Each million added tons produced would afford a living for 1,000 families, according to the governor's estimate.

Members of the Illinois Farm Bureau association, meeting in Springfield, formulated plans for membership drives in county, state and nation. G. E. Metzger, representing the state body, was the principal speaker.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has announced appointment of a new civil service commission, effective October 1. Harry S. Parker, prominent attorney of Effingham, is chairman of the commission, the other members being Harry S. Kramer, East St. Louis banker, and Mrs. Mabel Shirk of Chicago.

H. E. Young, secretary of the Illinois Farmers' Institute for more than 12 years, has resigned to become editor of the Illinois Farmer, a farm paper published in Chicago. His resignation is effective November 1.

The Right Way to Redye Fine Silks

Textile makers always use special dyes for silk or wool. They know that is the best way. The makers of Diamond Dyes are the first to enable home dyers to follow this plan. Next time you want to dye some of your more valuable articles of silk or wool, try the special Diamond Dyes in the Blue Package. They will give these materials clearer, more brilliant colors than any "all-purpose" dye. And they are just as easy to use as ordinary dyes. Like the white package Diamond Dyes, these dyes contain an abundance of the highest quality anilines. The blue package dyes silk or wool only; the white package dyes, or tints, any material. Either package; 15c, drugstores.

CHAPTER II

Fake Norwegians

It was in a gay cafe in Hamburg. In 1916, war times were growing hard in Germany, but still the cafes were astir with life and gaiety. A naval officer on shore leave could soon find surroundings that would enable him to forget the harsh life on dreadnaught and cruiser. My friend Dalstrom and I, over glasses of Swedish punch, chatted for an hour and then another hour.

An orderly wedged his way through the crowd and handed me a message. It was from the admiralty, ordering me to report at Imperial headquarters on the morrow.

The following morning found me in Berlin, entering the naval holy of holies, standing expectantly at attention before an old German sea lord with a face as stern as the cliffs at Heligoland. The orders I had come to hear were barked at me quick and short.

"You are to take command of a vessel," said the admiral. "We want you to run the blockade and raid enemy commerce. Since we have no coaling stations, a sailing ship will be the best. Do you think you can do it?"

"Yes, sir! I'd like nothing better," Good health and high spirits had given me boundless confidence. I was the sort of fellow who believes he can do almost anything—at any rate, anything with a sailing ship. The admiral replied that the mission was mine. And it turned out that I had been picked for this venture because I happened to be the only officer in the German navy who had served "in sail."

"What," the admiral asked, "should you consider of the greatest importance for the venture?"

"Luck," I replied. "All right; then take the Pass of Balmaha. She has already carried British prisoners for us. She has been lucky for us once, she may be lucky for us again."

The admiralty officials had picked the Pass of Balmaha because she was a staunch ship, an American clipper, built in Glasgow. They had also picked her because she had suddenly arrived in a German port with an unexpected present of some British prisoners for us. We sailors believe in good and bad omens, and we are right.

Now, about the past record of this Yankee clipper that was to be converted into a German raider. The Pass of Balmaha had sailed from New York with a cargo of cotton for Archangel. Her commander was a Captain Scott, a well-known American shipmaster, a big-hearted, bushy-bearded, New England skipper with a very red face. Off the Norwegian coast, a British cruiser hailed her. Uncle Sam was then a neutral, and the blockade was getting tighter every month. The British were becoming suspicious of everybody, including neutrals and themselves. The overcautious commander of this cruiser, although he had no grounds for suspicion, ordered the Pass of Balmaha to turn back to the search port of Kirkwall in the Orkneys.

Leaving an officer and prize crew of six marines on board, with her funnels belching columns of black smoke, the British patrol cruiser continued on her North Sea beat. As soon as the Pass of Balmaha had turned her nose toward Kirkwall and Scape Flow, the British prize officer ordered the American flag pulled down and the British flag run up.

"I wish the Germans would come," raged the Yankee skipper. And the very next morning his wish was granted! A U-boat popped up to the surface about a half mile away. Captain Scott waggled his beard in the Englishman's face.

"Serves you right! With the Stars and Stripes up there, they wouldn't bother us. Now they'll take us all to Germany. So far as you chaps are concerned, the war is over right now. You will get cocky, will you?"

The Britisher was alarmed. He saw visions of himself locked in a Prussian prison for "the duration." So he climbed down from his high horse in a hurry and meekly placed himself in Captain Scott's hands, begging the Yankee still to try and save the day.

"I ought to let you go as prisoners," by Joe, but I don't want to lose my ship," said Scott. "So go below with your men and hide in the hold while I put my flag back where it belongs. Maybe they haven't seen yours." Soon the submarine was alongside and one of her officers climbed aboard. The Germans had seen the Union Jack, all right, but they hadn't seen it hoisted down. Now they found themselves on a ship flying the American flag, and they were puzzled.

"What's this?" the submarine officer demanded of Scott. "First we see a British flag, and now it's an American."

"You must be mistaken," replied the skipper, "this here ain't no Britisher."

The officer was bewildered and suspicious, so ordered the Pass of Balmaha to head for Hamburg. Leaving only a German ensign aboard, he announced that his submarine would follow close behind. Of course, this was only a threat, for the U-boat soon vanished beneath the waves.

Now the ensign grew worried. Something told him that everything was not right on the Pass of Balmaha. Had he known there were seven Britishers on board, he would have been still more worried!

"Captain," said he, "I am going to stay at your side all day and sleep with you at night. I've a hand grenade here in my pocket. At night I am going to fix it so that if anybody opens the door of our cabin it will explode."

Naturally Captain Scott lost no time in whispering to his mate: "Fasten down the hatches and don't let those Britishers come up. If they do, our goose is cooked. Don't say anything to them, or there will be trouble. This German smells a rat."

So the prize crew in the hold was kept there. Two days later, outside the entrance to the harbor at Cuxhaven, another party of Germans came aboard, so Captain Scott said to the U-boat ensign:

"You wanted to know what was wrong here? All right, now I'll show you." Then he opened the hatches and yelled for the Britishers to come up. The tall officer of the Royal navy, one eye blinking and the other bemused, put his head up first.

"I say, where are we now?" "You're in Germany. If you had left my flag alone, everything would have been all right. But you are prisoners now."

So you see how the Pass of Balmaha turned out to be unlucky for Englishmen and lucky for Germans. That was just the ship we wanted, by Joe.

Our hope was to run the blockade disguised as a neutral—a thing entirely fair according to the laws of war. Although on land a soldier must wear service uniform, at sea you can fly a neutral flag and wear ordinary sea-man's clothes. But you must hold your true colors before going into action with the enemy.

We altered that British-built Yankee clipper from stem to stern, with concealed places for our guns, rifles, grenades, bombs, and other armament, with special quarters for prisoners, two ultra-modern 500 horse power motors to fall back on in case of calm or when in a big hurry, a tank holding 480 tons of fuel oil, another tank containing 480 tons of sweet water, and provisions for a cruise of two years.

In addition to 400 bunks for prospective "guests," I had special de luxe quarters made for "visiting" captains and mates. These were spacious cabins to accommodate two or three. We also designed a separate dining saloon for them, with an assortment of books and magazines in French and English, and a gramophone with late English and French records.

Then, of course, we had to arrange quarters for my crew of fighting marines as well as for the regular seamen required on a clipper of this size. Moreover, we had to do all this so it would not be noticeable to uninvited visitors.

When the work was done, below deck, the Pass of Balmaha was an auxiliary cruiser, armed to the teeth. Above deck she was merely a poetic old sailing ship loaded with a prosaic cargo of lumber.

Timber made the ideal cargo for our purposes, because a ship carrying lumber loads her deck as well as her hold. The piles of lumber even cover your hatches, so no one can go below until you unload. Hence no search crew would be likely to inspect us carefully at sea. They would either order us to Kirkwall, or let us go.

Norway exports lumber and Australia imports it. So we decided to pose as a Norwegian clipper bound for Melbourne. Having served on various Norwegian ships, I spoke Norse, and I knew I would have no difficulty finding men for my crew who could speak it also. But first I had secret doors and hatches cut in the floor of the closets in the officers' cabins, and another under the stove in the galley. From keel to top deck we converted this American three-master into a mystery ship of trick panels and doors.

Of course, if an enemy patrol vessel picked us up, a special prize crew of half a dozen men would be put aboard us to make sure we headed for the right port. I would have sixty-four men of my own to handle the small prize crew.

Dinner time would come. I would say to the Britishers: "Gentlemen, may you dine well."

"Cookie," I would call, "serve up the best we've got."

On their way to my private captain's quarters, they would leave their coats and weapons in the vestibule, within sight and just out of reach.

Light in the middle of the meal, I would signal to my fighting men hidden on the lower deck. Seizing their rifles they would jump to their appointed places. At another signal, the crew above deck would clamber up the iron masts, open small secret doors, reach down into the hollow chambers where their arms and uniforms were hidden, and a moment later German jack-tars would appear where humble Norwegian sailors had been a moment before. We would not attempt to recapture our own ship dressed in civilian togs.

Although the floor of my saloon where the prize crew would be dining looked like any other floor, it was in reality an elevator! All I had to do was press a secret button hidden behind the barometer in the chart room. Presto! down would drop floor, prize crew and all.

Before a man jack could jump for a weapon they would find themselves dining on the next deck below. With the difference that they now would be gazing down the barrels of twenty German rifles.

Then I would step forward, throw open my great-coat, and present myself as the skipper of a windjammer suddenly metamorphosed into the commander of an auxiliary cruiser.

And now, by Joe, suppose a British cruiser seized us and then we seized the British prize crew. Then supposing another cruiser should pick us up! We might have to do a bit of fighting, maybe take to the boats with our prisoners and then sink our own ship. So we prepared for this by placing bombs where they could be touched off at a moment's notice. We had no intention of letting our raider fall into enemy hands.

I felt that it was so important to keep all of our plans secret that I even fooled the workmen who were altering the ship. Had they known what we were up to, the rumor might have gotten out. There were spies everywhere. You must admire the British. They had a great espionage system, and they paid their spies well. We Germans were stingy. Bah! That was one reason we bungled.

So I told everyone, including the foremen, that the Pass of Balmaha was being transformed into an up-to-date training ship, to be used in training mechanics' apprentices who later on were to run motors on submarines and zeppelins.

That alibi was to explain our two motors. The war had shown that German cabin boys were deficient in knowledge of nautical rigging. So I also announced that one purpose of this sailing ship was to give them a chance to learn a little about handling sails. As to the accommodations in the hold for prisoners, and the bunks for our big crew, I explained that these were to be for apprentices and cabin boys. I even put up signs marking off one part of the ship "for 150 cabin boys," another "for 80 apprentices," and so on.

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D.D., Dean Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.) (©, 1929, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for October 13

KEEPING FIT FOR THE SAKE OF OTHERS

Temperance Lesson

LESSON TEXT—Dan. 1:8-20, 1 Cor. 9:19-27, 1 Tim. 4:7-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Taking Care of Our Bodies.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Keeping Fit. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Self-control for the Common Good. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Temperance Essential to the Highest Usefulness.

In the use of this as a temperance lesson it must be borne in mind that it is temperance in the sense of self-mastery rather than indulgence in intoxicating liquors.

1. The Self-mastery of Daniel and His Companions (Dan. 1:5-20).

These young men were wrenched from their homes and country in the tender years of youth and carried away as captives to a strange land.

1. Their trials (vv. 5-7).

(1) The test of conscience (v. 5).

By the appointment of the king, a portion of the king's meat and wine was provided daily for the captives. This being contrary to the Jewish customs, the young men could not conscientiously partake of them. Conscience is the groundwork of human character.

(2) Changed name (vv. 6, 7).

Among the Hebrews, names were given to children which were most significant. Daniel means "God is my judge." The significance of this name was that all the problems of life were submitted to God for His decision. This was the secret of Daniel's successful life.

(3) Their religious life (v. 8).

This involved their refusal to eat meat and to drink wine. In the case of Daniel at least, it also involved his praying three times a day. Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with this food and drink.

2. Their courtesy (vv. 8-13).

Daniel seems to have been the spokesman for the company. Although his heart was fixed, he did not forget to be a gentleman. He requested that he be excused from this meat and drink in order not to be defiled.

3. Their triumph (vv. 14-21).

(1) Their physical health (vv. 14-16).

A test was made for ten days which showed that they were fairer in countenance and fatter in flesh than those who indulged in the king's meat.

(2) Their mental growth (vv. 17-20).

Daniel and his companions were found to be ten times better than their comrades in wisdom and understanding.

(3) Social and political preferment (v. 19). They stood before the king.

(4) Their temporal influence (v. 21). All were advanced to positions of influence, and Daniel became president of the college of wise men, and the prime minister of the nation.

II. Paul Advises the Corinthians as to Self-control (1 Cor. 9:19-27).

The Corinthians were an intemperate and a dissolute people. No city in the world perhaps exceeded them in vices of all kinds. The surest and most effective way to combat vice is to inculcate virtue.

1. Paul's own life and example (vv. 19-23).

Though free from all men, he made himself servant unto all.

2. The Isthmian games (vv. 24-27).

Paul uses these popular games to illustrate the need of self-control. (1) Life is a race (vv. 24, 25). In order to win a prize there must be self-denial and definite exertion. The Christian obtains life by contact with Jesus Christ through faith (John 3:16; 3:36; 5:24). While he gets salvation (life) at the beginning, God places before him definite rewards as incentives to exertion. The Christian believes for life, but works for rewards.

(2) It is a fight (vv. 26, 27).

The Christian's efforts are not mere beatings of the air. He has a deadly struggle with his carnal nature.

III. Paul's Advice to Timothy (1 Tim. 4:7-12).

A minister needs to have control of himself. He is urged to exercise himself unto godliness. He needs to train himself for his work as a teacher and a minister.

ONE PRESCRIPTION MADE FAMILY DOCTOR FAMOUS

Seldom has any single act been of greater benefit to mankind than that of Dr. Caldwell in 1885, when he wrote the prescription which has carried his fame to the four corners of the earth.

Over and over, Dr. Caldwell wrote the prescription as he found men, women and children suffering from those common symptoms of constipation, such as coated tongue, bad breath, headaches, gas, nausea, biliousness, no energy, lack of appetite, and similar things.

Demand for this prescription grew so fast, because of the pleasant, quick way it relieved such symptoms of constipation, that by 1888 Dr. Caldwell was forced to have it put up ready for use. Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is always ready at any drugstore.

Former Mokena Pastor Writes of Interesting Trip

1523 Fifth Ave., North
Grand Forks, North Dakota,
September 19, 1929.
Dear Mr. and Mrs. Semmler:-

We have wanted very much to tell you all about our trip this summer and about our new location here. Since our unoccupied hours are so very few and you are so many we have thought to reach you real soon by means of this mimeographed letter.

As you already know we accepted the position of Instructor in Sociology at the University of North Dakota. We purchased a used model T Ford (four older one having been stolen) and set out to tour through five states before our arrival here.

Leaving Chicago on July 29 we went to El Paso, Illinois, and then to Ladoga, Indiana, at which places we spent two and a half weeks visiting with our folks. While with the folks at El Paso we spent several delightful half days on the Golf Course. While in Indiana we made trips to Indianapolis, Mooresville, and finally to Valparaiso where we spent a happy week end with our good friends Mr. and Mrs. Owen Price (Elsie Schulze) who live in that city.

From Valparaiso we started north early Monday morning, following the beautiful lake shore drive (U. S. 31) through lower Michigan. We spent Monday night in Scottsville, a little town east of Ludington. The next afternoon at four o'clock we arrived at Mackinaw, a little town at the extreme northern point of Lower Michigan. There is no land connection between Lower and Upper Michigan, the two Peninsulas are however, divided only by the Straits of Mackinac, connecting Lake Michigan and Huron, at Mackinaw. These Straits being nine miles wide, one must take a ferry across. When we arrived at the ferry docks there was a line of tourist cars more than a mile long waiting to be taken across. After a two-hour wait in line we were able to drive onto one of the three State Auto Transport ferries operating between Mackinaw and St. Ignace. We were told that these ferries carried 1,100 autos the previous day.

About seven o'clock we landed in the Upper Peninsula known and advertised as "Hiawatha Land". It is said that while Longfellow never visited this vast territory of lakes and woods he did get a large part of his material for the poem from a farmer resident of Northern Mich.

We spent about sixteen hours in and about St. Ignace, a very popular tourist city. We visited the Indian village, and saw the squaws at work at basketry in their native wigwams. We had a grand view of the northern forests from the summit of Castle Rock, followed for half an hour a romantic old Indian trail around Rabbit's Back Peak, had a delicious chicken dinner at a resort at the foot of the Peak, and then continued our journey North-east. We passed through miles and miles of burned over forests which was everywhere a panoramic view of desolation.

We spent a night in Munising, "the Naples of America". This was a truly beautiful city which nestles in a lovely curving amphitheatre of wooded hills overlooking Lake Superior and Grand Island. We climbed one of these hills in the early morning and wandered through the dark, dense woods marking our path to keep from getting lost.

Leaving Munising we skirted the edge of the Mackinac National Forest, one of the most beautiful virgin forests we saw anywhere.

Early Wednesday afternoon we arrived in Marquette and went immediately to the Binger's summer camp at Lakewood where we had been invited to spend as much time as we could. The camp was located on a beautiful winding river in the woods and near the shores of Lake Superior. Here we stayed a glorious twelve days with the Binger family. We swam, rowed, hiked, picked wild berries, climbed Sugar Loaf Mountain, and motored and picnicked in many interesting and beautiful places. The weather was ideal for vacation time and you may be sure that we were thrilled by the wonders of "Hiawatha Land".

We left Marquette on September 3, driving west through the Ford Motor Company's immense timber reservation. All along the road there were signs warning us to drive "slow" in case wild deer were seen on the road. We came at noon to a little hunting station called Sidnaw, on the edge of the Keweenaw National Forest, from whence, so we were told, as many as 130 deer were shipped out by hunters in one day during the open season.

We stopped the first night in Ironwood just across the Wisconsin state line. This city is the western gateway to "Hiawatha Land". It is an iron mining city and has the largest open-pit mine in the world.

We made other stops at Ashland, Wisconsin; Duluth, Grand Rapids, and Bemidji, Minnesota, arriving in Grand Forks on September 6. Our speedometer registered 2334 miles since leaving Chicago. (Grand Forks is about 875 miles northwest of El Paso).

We are greatly impressed with the prospects for this coming year here. Grand Forks is a city of 20,000. (It's 20,002 since we arrived) on the Red River eighty miles south of the Canadian line and 160 miles south of Winnipeg, a city we hope to visit soon. The city is growing rapidly and that fact led us into difficulty in finding suitable furnished living quarters for the nine months we expect to be here. We looked at just exactly 48 houses, apartments and suites of rooms before finding our present location which is the upstairs of a private home, consisting of a living room, bedroom, kitchen, and bath.

The University is a growing institution with a beautiful campus and set of buildings and with a faculty of 148 men and women.

We shall during these coming weeks be adjusting ourselves to a new home, a new climate (they tell us it gets 40 below here!) and most of all to a new status in University life-do not yet realize who is meant when addressed as "Professor" Mangus.

We are so far from our "old friends" that we can hardly expect the pleasure of seeing any of you, but the Postman makes his round twice daily and we have a box and will be happy to hear from you real soon.

With all good wishes,
Cordially,
RAY and NELLIE MANGUS

Great strides in invention, great expenditures...

BUSINESS, using the telephone, eliminates space and time. The far-flung parts of an organization with its dealers and customers are brought together by instant speech. The home, like the office, reaches out over an ever-widening circle of neighbors. The telephone is tireless and quick. It runs errands near and far, transacts business, keeps friendships alive. Telephones throughout the house save time and fatigue. They bring the comforts and conveniences of the office to the women in the home. Keeping ahead of the new developments in American life calls for great strides in invention, great expenditures in money. The Bell System's outlay this year for new plant and service improvements is more than 550 million dollars. This is one and one-half times the cost of the Panama Canal. This program is part of the telephone ideal that anyone, anywhere, shall be able to talk quickly and at reasonable cost with anyone, anywhere else. There is no standing still in the Bell System.

Bricks Used by Aviators

In the early days of the World War French aviators carried as part of their equipment a bag of bricks. They were carried in the hope that a pilot might be able to hurl a brick into the propeller of the enemy's airplane. Two German machines were thus brought down.

Cameos

The word "cameo" is not the name of a gem. It is merely a method of cutting. In other words, any hard substance or gem can be made into a cameo, although usually onyx, sardonyx, agate and ivory are used.

To Demonstrate Television At Radio Show

Television with sound from one of the nation's greatest scientific laboratories, as perfect as it exists anywhere in the world, will be demonstrated in Chicago, for the first time, at the Chicago Radio Show, Coliseum, October 21 to 27, it was announced today by G. Clayton Irwin, Jr., general manager.

In a ground glass screen, fourteen inches by fourteen inches, visitors will be able to see animated pictures of actors as they perform, at a remote point, before the television camera. And as they speak or sing their voices will be picked up by a microphone and reproduced by loud speakers in the television theater so that it will seem to the spectators that the actors on the television screen are giving the audible performance.

Construction of a television studio and a television theater is now in progress within the Coliseum. They will be so arranged that show visitors may compare the living artists with the television reproduction.

Under the direction of Austin Rahe, America's only Director of Television Productions, leading professional, civic, and political men and women will be televised. Mr. Rahe will also direct the Chicago Radio Show television troupe, a group of artists specially trained for television productions.

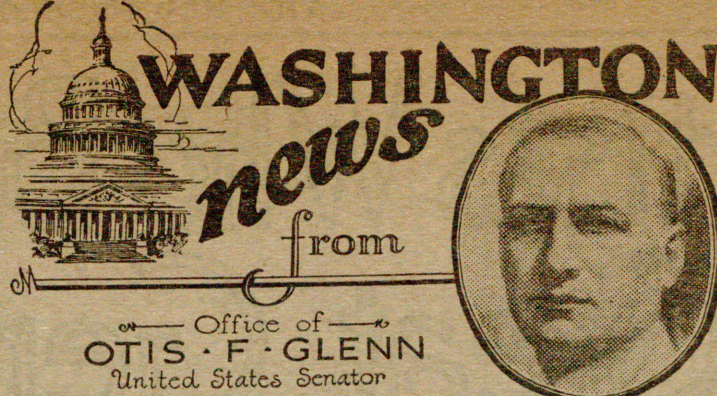

The system of television which will be demonstrated under the supervision of the Radio Corporation of America is that developed by Dr. E. W. F. Alexanderson, its consulting engineer. R. D. Kell, assistant to Dr. Alexanderson, will be in charge of the Television equipment. In announcing the demonstration of television at the Chicago Radio Show, Mr. Irwin was emphatic in his statement that television is still in the laboratory stage and that no man was able to predict when it might be perfected.

"When television comes," he said, "it will find an eager world waiting with outstretched arms to receive it. But whether it will ever be possible for the residents of Chicago and the central states to witness a football game on the Pacific or Atlantic seaboard from their own firesides remains unanswered by the men who are engaged in television research. They have hope, but give no assurance.

"Nevertheless television has such a powerful grip on the imagination of the entire civilized world that everyone is anxious to keep abreast of its development. This will be the first time in the history of Chicago modern television from one of the greatest scientific laboratories of the nation has ever been publicly demonstrated or even demonstrated privately."

MacDONALD VISIT STIRS HOPE FOR ARMAMENT SETTLEMENT

The arrival of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald in Washington last week in the interest of the Capitol in details of his visit - both social and business. A six day program has been arranged for the Premier and his eldest daughter and hostess, Isabel, between the White House and the British embassy. President Hoover is optimistic over prospects for an early solution to the naval armament problem, though no finality can be reached until Japan, France and Italy collaborate. To allay fears the President recently assured Americans that proper defense would be maintained.

PRESIDENT EXPECTED TO AID INLAND WATERWAY

Indication by President Hoover that he would urge appropriation for inland waterways in his annual message to the regular session has given impetus to the fight by mid-west Senators and Congressmen for completion of the Lakes-to-Gulf waterway. Completion of the Illinois River project is regarded as next in line now that the Ohio is open from Pittsburgh to Cairo. It is expected that the Mississippi will be improved as far north as Minneapolis and that the Missouri will also benefit by the program.

RADIO DISPLACING CARRIER PIGEONS IN NAVY

Pigeons, for centuries depended upon to deliver messages of prime importance to governments and kings, now are being displaced in the Navy Department by radio broadcast. Eight of the sixteen pigeon lofts, including the one at the Naval Air station in Washington, have been discontinued in the last week by the department. In spite of their fame as a means of communication, officials say homing pigeons have not been adapted successfully to airplanes and fast ocean travel. However, about 400 birds will be kept in training at Lakehurst, N. J., and the naval station at Guam. The same number is being disposed of. Races for young birds now under training are scheduled to be held soon. These birds of three and four months will fly 100 and 150 miles. Jolly Tarr, of the Anacostia station, took eight prizes this year, winning both the 500- and 600- mile events.

ORLAND PARK

A new dentist has been in town looking over the field and it is understood he will open an office in the Zerbis building Saturday of this week. He comes from Chicago and it is understood will have office hours here two days a week for the beginning.

The Orland State Bank will remain closed this Saturday in observance of Columbus Day, a legal holiday.

Rev. Willie F. Huebner will be the preacher at the 10:30 a. m. service in the St. John's Evangelical church at Mokena on Sunday October 13. Sunday school at 9:30.

Thomas Davidson is having a building erected on 143rd street. The new structure is 45x72 feet. It is reported that Mr. Davidson will use the new building for garage purposes. A show room with plate glass windows will face 143rd street.

Work on the installation of the new heating plant in the Orland Park School will be started within the next few days.

The annual bazaar of the Orland Park M. E. church held last Thursday was a big success in every way. There was a fine supper and every thing that was for sale found ready buyers and brought good prices. The members of the Ladies Guild who sponsored the bazaar feel grateful to all who helped make the affair the big success it was. The receipts totaled over $500.

Several property owners along 143rd street have laid their concrete walks while some of the other property owners are holding out on building their walks. Some of those property owners who have laid their walks threaten to take legal action to force the other owners to lay their walks.

Rev. Paul T. Sanders has been returned as pastor of the Orland Park M. E. church for another year.

Members of St. Michaels parish have started a drive for a fund for a new parish house.

The board of directors of the Orland State Bank met Wednesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Riter and the latter's sister of Chicago were guests in the Russel Myrick home Sunday.

Mrs. Molly Jackson of Mokena visited with her brother Russel Myrick Wednesday.

New buildings and improvements are being erected and made at the Tribune Camp in the Forest Preserve northwest of town.

Gas Tax May Be Deducted From Income Tax

In a recent decision of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, received by Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blackledge, Collector of Internal Revenue for the First District of Illinois, it has been held that the motor fuel tax, levied in accordance with the provisions of the law of the State of Illinois, effective August 1, 1929, imposing a tax on motor fuels, is deductible in the income tax return of the consumer who pays it and to whom it is not refunded. If, however, the tax is added to or made a part of the business expenses of such consumer, it cannot be deducted by him separately as a tax.

Help Make Illinois Greatest State

Mr. H. L. Williamson, Secretary of the Illinois Press Association and Publicity Agent for the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, hopes in the near future to see this state the greatest in the Union.

He addressed the Rotary club at Mason City last Friday at the noon hour. Before beginning his history sketch on Lovejoy he briefly outlined a few recommendations for Illinois supremacy.

Buy Illinois Products was his star slogan. After making this statement Mr. Williamson went ahead to enumerate some of the ways in which we can make Illinois the greatest state in the Union.

By the purchase of Illinois products by our own citizens we can greatly increase production in all lines, which will add wealth and population, which are two of the things this state hopes to excel in.

Some of the products the speaker mentioned were farm products, orchard products, mineral products and manufactured products.

If Illinois can furnish products of a satisfactory quality and price, we should give our own state the edge on purchases of all products produced in the state.

He gave as an illustration for extra effort put forth in the disposal of the 1929 crop of southern Illinois peaches, which was greatly assisted through the efforts of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce.

Also by a concentrated effort the coal output of Illinois has been increased by at least thirty per cent.

Mr. Williamson thinks that by proper effort on the part of our citizens, Illinois will in twenty years from now be the leading state in the nation both in population and wealth—Mason City Banner Times, September 19, 1929.

Some Artists Who Became Great Generals

By Cadet William Tecumseh Sherman, 1838

By Cadet George G. Meade, 1833

By Cadet U. H. Grant, 1841

And the Story of One Who Didn't—But Who Rose to World-Wide Fame as a Painter.

IF EVER you visit the United States Military Academy be sure to ask that they take you to the classrooms where the cadets receive their instruction in drawing, for a thrill awaits you there. Hung upon the walls of those classrooms is a remarkable collection of pen sketches, water colors, crayon drawings and wash drawings. The subjects of these pictures may not interest you very much but if you step closer to one of them to see who was the artist who made it you will have a surprise in store.

For instance, there is the one which pictures a Greek warrior of the ancient days. Down in one corner of the picture is a barely decipherable signature—"J. Davis." Perhaps this doesn't mean anything to you especially until you see a typewritten sheet inserted in the other corner which reads as follows: "This picture, drawn by Jefferson Davis while a cadet at the U. S. M. A., was presented to me on August 13, 1924, by Sergeant Starr, retired, formerly of the service detachment, now on the police force of the State, War and Navy building at Washington. He informed me that when the old academic building (the one that stood on the site of the present west academic building) was torn down that the drawing fell in the hands of some friend of his from whom he afterwards obtained it and that he, Douglas Newton Starr, made the frame from a part of a bannister railing of one of the staircases in the old academic building, (signed) Fred W. Sladen, Major General, Superintendent."

So more than a hundred years ago this Greek warrior's portrait came from the pencil of a slender young Kentuckian, appointed to the military academy from Mississippi in 1824 and graduated in 1828, who had his first military experience as a second lieutenant of infantry in the Black Hawk war in 1832 and who, as a colonel of Mississippi volunteers in the Mexican war, distinguished himself at the battle of Buena Vista by an exploit which was to have much to do with his future career. For Jefferson Davis's greatest fame lies not in his career as a soldier but as a statesman. He was successively a member of the United States house of representatives, United States senator and secretary of war. And later, in 1861, the Confederate congress, remembering the hero of Buena Vista and Davis's services in the war portfolio in President Franklin Pierce's cabinet, selected him for the position of president of the Confederate States of America.

But the portrait of the Greek warrior made by Jefferson Davis is not the only one made by a cadet destined for future fame. Near it is a scene in an Indian camp of the old days. In the foreground a chief squats holding his gayly decorated pipe as he dickers with the white trader whose wares of blankets, knives and other trinkets are spread enticingly before him. Standing to one side is an Indian woman, papoose in arms, who seems much interested in the bargaining.

The artist who depicted this scene was Cadet U. H. Grant, a graduate from the academy in 1841. Perhaps most Americans know him as U. S. Grant, those initials standing both for Ulysses Simpson and "Unconditional Surrender" but when he was at West Point he signed his name as U. H. Grant for Ulysses Hiram was the name which his mother had given him.

Close beside the drawing made by the future commander-in-chief of the Union forces in the Civil war is one made by a man who, next to

By Cadet Jefferson Davis

Grant, was the greatest leader of the boys in blue. It is a classical subject, a Greek warrior slaying a centaur, and it is signed by Cadet William Tecumseh Sherman, a graduate in the class of 1838. Not far away is a painting of a different sort—a water color picturing a riverside city, perhaps an ancient walled town somewhere in Italy. It is a painting of rare beauty and one which might well have come from the brush of a dreamy-eyed artist. Looking at its soft coloring it is difficult to realize that the hand which held the brush that put this scene on canvas was the same hand which directed the movements of thousands of armed men on the bloody battlefield of Gettysburg, those hot days of July 1, 2, and 3, 1863. For this painting was made by Cadet George C. Meade of the class of '33, whose victory over the great Robert E. Lee, a fellow West Pointer, was still thirty years in the future.

But these drawings by "artists who became great generals" are not the only artistic treasures which adorn the walls of this West Point classroom. There, too, are examples of work by one artist who never became even so much as a "shavetail" (lieutenant) but who did become one of the greatest American artists of all time. Once upon a time James Abbott McNeill Whistler humorously remarked: "Had silicon been a noxious gas I would have been a general today." Back of this remark is the history of a brief career at West Point. In 1852 Whistler was appointed to West Point. He was there for two years. Then came the fatal day when he and his classmates were taking an examination in chemistry. Was silicon a noxious gas or wasn't it? That was one of the questions confronting the future generals. Young Whistler guessed that it was. And he guessed wrong. It is probable that it was only one of several mistakes which he made in the examination. At any rate, he was "found"—that is, discharged from the academy for deficiency in chemistry.

Today a "Whistler" is one of the most prized possessions of public art galleries and private collectors, and the United States Military Academy is the possessor of not only one but five genuine "Whistlers," and what makes them even more valuable is the fact that they are "early Whistlers." They are all copies of drawings and paintings which Whistler made from the work of recognized masters. One of them shows a group before the door of a medieval castle with the lord of the manor distributing alms to the poor. Even more interesting is another of his, showing two pretty Italian girls gossiping in a doorway. Although this was a copy, Whistler showed his independent genius in an interesting way. In copying the original he changed one of the girls from a brunette to a blonde so as to give variety to the picture and he painted in the shadowy figure of a young soldier at the end of the street so as to give the girls something to gossip about.

Surprising as it may seem to some Americans that the great American painter was once a West Point cadet it might not be so surprising perhaps if they knew of the military background of Whistler's family. In 1758 there was born in Ireland of an old English family of Whistlers a boy to whom was given the name of John. During the American Revolution he ran away from home and joined the army, coming to America with the troops under Burgoyne in 1777. He was thus one of the members of "Gentleman Johnny's" ill-fated army which was captured by the Americans at Saratoga. Returning to England, Whistler was discharged from the army and soon afterwards eloped with the daughter of one of his father's friends. Believing that life in America offered greater opportunities for him, he brought his bride to this country and settled at Hagerstown, Md. In 1791 he entered the American army and served continuously on the frontier of the old northwest under St. Clair, Wayne and others. In 1803 the secretary of war ordered Colonel Hamtramck of the First Infantry, commander at Detroit, to send an officer and six men to establish a military post where the Chicago river flows into Lake Michigan. Colonel Hamtramck selected for this duty Capt. John Whistler, and made him commander of the new post which was to be built there.

Whistler arrived at the site of the present city of Chicago in August, 1803, and began building the stockaded structure to which was given the name of Fort Dearborn, in honor of the secretary of war. Thus he became the founder of the first permanent settlement on the site of the metropolis of the Middle West and to him historians have given the title of the "Father of Chicago." Whistler was accompanied to Chicago by his family. One of them was a daughter, Sarah, who on November 1, 1804, married James Abbott, a Detroit merchant. The wedding which was performed by John Kinzie was the first marriage of white people in Chicago. Another member of his family was a son, George Washington Whistler, then a toddling child three years old. When this boy grew up he was sent to West Point and was graduated from the academy at the age of nineteen. He was assigned to the artillery branch of the service and after his resignation from the army in 1833 he rose to eminence as an engineer. A year after Whistler's resignation from the army, a son was born to him at Lowell, Mass.

To this son was given the name of James Abbott McNeill Whistler, and it was this boy who achieved in the realm of art an even greater reputation than had his father in engineering. Although the connection of Whistler, the artist, with the history of Fort Dearborn and Chicago is not commonly known, one historian has said: "The very names he bore served constantly to advertise it." The Abbott part of it was in honor of James Abbott, Chicago's first bridegroom and the McNeill was in honor of Lieut. Col. John McNeill, commander of Fort Dearborn from 1821 to 1823. "The artist himself never saw Chicago, but with the exception of West Point there was no other place in the United States in which he was more interested," writes M. M. Quaife in "Chicago and the Old Northwest." He regarded his grandfather as the founder of Chicago and more than once lamented his failure to visit the place.

When Babies CRY

Babies will cry, often for no apparent reason. You may not know what's wrong, but you can always give Castoria. This soon has your little one comforted; if not, you should call a doctor. Don't experiment with medicines intended for the stronger systems of adults! Most of those little upsets are soon soothed away by a little of this pleasant-tasting, gentle-acting children's remedy that children like.

It may be the stomach, or may be the little bowels. Or in the case of older children, a sluggish, constipated condition. Castoria is still the thing to give. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment, and could by no possibility do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue; won't play, can't sleep, is fretful or out of sorts. Get the genuine; it always has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

America Has Practical

Broom-Corn Monopoly

Broom corn is one of those natural products, like cork, that are so perfectly adapted to the uses to which they are put that no substitute has been found or is likely to be found. It is almost exclusively an American crop. The first broom-corn market in this country was developed by the Shaker community at Watervliet, N.Y., in 1798.

In the early part of the Eighteenth century broom-corn raising and broom making were largely in the hands of the Shakers and others in New England, especially in the Connecticut valley. Later the center of the industry shifted to the Mohawk valley. Until well past the middle of the century New York and Virginia continued to be the broom country; then production started moving westward.

COULD NOT SLEEP NIGHTS

Helped By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fairhaven, Mass.—"I am taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during the Change of Life and I think it is a wonderful tonic. When I feel nervous and run-down my husband gets me a bottle right away. It is a great help to me and I think that if other people would only take it when they feel all run-down and take it as the directions say, they would find it a great benefit. My worst symptoms were nervousness and tired feelings. I could not sleep nights and I did not care about my work. I was so nervous I would cry if anyone looked at me."—Mrs. Ada Besse, 196 Washington Street, Fairhaven, Mass.

To Identify Genuine Aspirin

THE increasing use of Bayer Aspirin every year is proof that it has no ill effects. It is the accepted antidote for pain. It always helps; it never harms. Quick relief when you've a headache, or cold; or are suffering from neuralgia or neuritis. Rheumatic pains yield, too, if you'll only give these tablets a chance. But you want genuine Aspirin, so look for the Bayer Cross on every tablet. The box always bears the name Bayer and the word "genuine" printed in red. Proven directions inside.

Schoolgirl learns simple health measure

WITH all the talk there is nowadays about the independence of the sub-deb generation, your reporter got a great kick out of hearing a grandmother describe how her granddaughter was following a good old tried and true method of improving her general health.

"My granddaughter, Margaret," says Mrs. Zell of 6231 Catherine Street, Philadelphia, "read about Nujol, was interested in it, so sent for a sample." It seems she has been taking a tablespoon of Nujol once a day since and expects to continue this treatment. Already she has found an improvement in her general health, her system functioning normally where other remedies had failed.

That's one of the best things about Nujol. It is just as harmless for young girls, or babies even, as it is for adults. For Nujol contains no medicines or drugs. It can't upset

TINLEY PARK TRIANGLE NOTES

OCTOBER 26!

Hello folks! Remember this date folks. Have quite a few things to tell you this week even tho' the "World Series" is on.

On last Monday night the Club held its regular meeting. The Triarsie Club is doing great things. Basket ball is being planned for the winter. A big Halloween Dance. "Beard Growing Contest" (for men only)

The Club is growing too. Three new members were admitted last Monday. Give you their names next week. The Club is trying hard to make a good name for itself. This sure gives it a lot of encouragement.

Our president is full of ideas and pep. Just watch this name: "Triangle Club."

Anybody wishing to join this club can do so by giving their name to any member. Must be sixteen or over.

As there is no gym in Tinley the club will take its three basket ball teams and play "out of town" games. If a gym can be located in this "big city" please see our president, Henry Boldt.

We have a new name for one of our old members. Benny Argyle has decided to call himself "Argadylo". Must be more aristocratic folks.

This "Beard Growing" contest is not in favor of by our girls. They say it'll be hard on the complexion. Excuse us.
